I believe that school leaders should make student well-being central to their work. One of my roles as Assistant Principal is Instructional Leader. I strive to improve the quality of teaching, which will result in an improvement in student learning. My role in building a strong school community is also aligned with my belief that school leaders should make student well-being central to their work. We must focus on more than the academic achievement of our students. I understand the importance of educating the whole child and forming bonds with students, teachers, and parents.
